Primary Education Curriculum - 2012

English (First Language)

Preamble

A separate syllabus for English as First language is being drafted for the first time. The syllabus for English as the first language has been prepared in accordance with the guidance, values, core elements and life skills outlined in National Curriculum Framework 2005, Right to Education 2009 and related documents.

In English Medium Schools, the language of instruction is of course, English. Children studying in such schools speak other languages at home and in their surrounding. English is not their mother tongue or home language. This reality has to be kept in view while framing the curriculum, designing the syllabus, writing the teaching materials, delivering these materials in the classroom and evaluating the performance of learner's home language as a barrier than as a boon. The present curriculum development committee is of the opinion that it is essential to treat their 'home language' as a rich resources of language learning if necessary, with their parent's help.

Against this background, teachers, parents and school managements are expected to encourage children to use as much English as possible in the classroom and in their everyday activities. We need to keep in mind that the transition from their 'home language' to English will happen gradually. Use of home language / mother tongue should be allowed in the classroom in the initial period.

Children's home language / mother tongue needs to be handled with love and dignity. Therefore, at the primary level and especially in English Medium Schools, it is essential to accommodate bilingual / multilingual activities and projects.

A) Salient features of the syllabus :

- The Syllabus is child centred and child friendly :

The syllabus focuses on the learning achievements of the child rather, than on internally imposed content and standards of performance.

- The Syllabus is activity oriented and skill based :

The syllabus encourages children to learn on their own through actively participating in these activities for the acquisition of these skills. The learner is expected to learn to use English. The focus is on enabling the child to use English in real-life situations.

- The Syllabus recommends an eclectic approach :

Teachers can use different types of effective methods and techniques based on the following criteria.

- (a) They should motivate children to learn and should engage them in learning activity.

- (b) The techniques and learning items should have a high functional value in the child's life inside and outside the classroom.
- (c) The techniques and learning items should be useful to children in their current and future studies.
- A holistic approach : The syllabus is designed to ensure a co-ordinated development of all language skills and all round development of the child's personality. It also seeks to link the teaching/learning of English with that of other subjects.
- The syllabus provides ample scope for self-learning and learning to learn : The syllabus attempts to minimize learner's dependence on their teachers and increase their autonomy. The activities and tasks suggested in the syllabus aim at achieving this objective.
- The syllabus is need-based and age-appropriate : That is why it presents series of graded activities from class I to VIII.
- The revised syllabus encourages innovation.

The revised syllabus deliberately provides ample opportunities to text book writers, teachers as well as learners to generate novel ideas to help them to construct knowledge of the surrounding world and natural phenomena. However, the inventory of tasks given under the heading "Innovation/ Extension" is neither exhaustive nor restrictive. Textbook writers and teachers may supplement or alter the ideas and tasks.

The syllabus makes an effort to encourage the use of information technology wherever necessary and possible. This attempt to integrate information technology with the teaching and learning of English will equip the learners to be able to face future challenges.

B) Some important considerations :

➤ The teaching of Grammar :

Children internalise the rules of language as they get first hand exposure to English through a series of activities graded according to their age and linguistic competence. Therefore, grammar is not, to be taught separately in lower primary classes, and the teaching of technical terms, definitions and grammatical explanation are to be avoided.

At the upper primary level too grammar should not be taught as an end in itself.

Grammatical explanations should aim only at helping children to use language in a better and systematic manner. Linguistic explanations should also cover matters of usage (idiomatic use of English). They should also enable the children to appreciate creative use of language.

➤ Use of mother tongue :

Textbook writers and teachers can find many innovative ways of exploiting the students' knowledge of their mother tongue and their linguistic environment in general to strengthen and enrich their learning of English. However, rote learning of meanings and mechanical translation exercises must be discouraged.

At the upper primary level, translation can be used to enhance the students' literary abilities and study skills. Translation activities can be usefully linked with other subjects of study.

➤ Pronunciation :

The syllabus does not recommend a strictly British or American model of pronunciation, What we aim at is an 'educated Indian' variety of spoken English. In other words, our aim is to cultivate national intelligibility, confidence, appropriateness and a reasonable speed in children's speech. Stress and intonation are important features of speech and children should certainly be made aware of these but they need not be taught to the detriment of learning other aspects of the English language.

➤ Errors Tolerance

Children are likely to make mistakes while learning. Too much emphasis on error correction can dampen their enthusiasm and confidence. Teachers are advised not to single out children's errors, especially those in their speech. The focus in the early years should be on fluency, appropriate use of language and confidence building.

➤ Continuous comprehensive evaluation (C.C.E.)

The learner's performance will be assessed continuously over a year. Secondly, evaluation will be done comprehensively and holistically. In other words, the facilitator will record in learner's profile items such as continuous participation, quality of performance, respect for others opinions, creative thinking and so on.
